ABOUT THE WORKSHOP:

The needs of gifted students—those who learn or have the potential to learn at a faster rate and in more depth than their age level peers—are sometimes overlooked in today's schools. Yet these students have great promise as well as the potential to be some of our best thinkers and future problem solvers. Our goal should be to teach gifted students in such a way as to ensure their intellectual growth and help them fully develop their talents and abilities.

In this workshop, you will learn a variety of practical approaches to use in teaching gifted students. Discover ways to infuse rigor into your lessons and units. Learn about differentiation strategies that challenge gifted students and take into account their individual differences. In addition, we will address some common concerns of parents of gifted children and discuss how to best work with them.

WORKSHOP TOPICS INCLUDE:

- Introductory concepts about gifted students and differentiation
- Flexible grouping
- Curriculum compacting
- Resident experts
- Learning contracts
- Ascending intellectual demand
- Tiered lessons and units
- Dealing with parents

“Early Bird” registration must be mailed no later than November 9, 2007
